Judge Landis Is Firm in Stand Against Return of Acquitted Sox to Organized Baseball

JURY'S VERDICT DOES NOT OPEN GATES TO FORMER WHITE SOX

Judge Takes Firm Stand Against All Tainted Ball Players and It Is Doubtful if Victors in "Scotch Verdict" Ever Will Play in Organized Baseball Again

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL

Sports Editor Evening Public Ledger THE weak, anemic ending of the trial of the seven White Sox ball players who were accused of entering into a conspiracy to "throw" the 1919 World's Series was a bitter disappointment to all real, genuine sportsmen. The verdict of the jury, the wild scenes which followed in the courtroom, placing of these accused and self-confessed fakers on a pedestal, woring them as abused heroes, and the pale, sickly manner in which the affair was handled makes one wonder if it is worth while to stay on the straight and narrow path when it is so crowded

Last fall Eddie Cicotte confessed to his part in the affair, and two others followed. These confessions were made before a Special Grand Jury, but during this trial when the confessions were called for they were missing. Somebody had stolen then from the State's Attorney's office. The prosecution made out a strong case on insufficient evidence, but the defense spent huge sums of oney for legal talent to hurl wrenches into the machinery and put the parade out of step. This proved to be successful.

Despite the fact that 99 per cent of the baseball fans in the United States believe the men did not play their best in the series against Cincinnati, they have been acquitted. It couldn't be proved that they deliberately made errors in the field and that the pitchers deliberately threw easy balls to hit and the batters ignored hit-and-run signs and usually failed dismally in the nches, so the "Scotch verdict" was returned. The players believe they bave scored a victory.

Perhaps they have-legally. But when it comes to satisfying the real baseball fan, the fan who knows the difference, it will take more than a verdict from a jury which holds a celebration afterward with the accused men, sings "Hail, the gang's all here," and spends most of the night in a cafe. According to reports, the jurors felt as much pleased over the verdict as the accused players.

From now on our idea of an innocent man is a dishonest ball player who gets caught.

When visiting the training camps of the big league clubs last spring it was common gossip about the work of the Black Sox in the 1919 and 1920 seasons. There was no secret about it, and the players all hoped that the accused men would get their just deserts. Nobody had the slightest idea that they were innocent, and they won't believe it now. Because there was no law in Illinois to cover the case does not mean that the men were unjustly accused and were very much abused. It means they were lucky to get off without a sentence.

STILL, when one realizes that in Illinois they have a Governor accused of embezzlement, gunmen taking target practice in the streets, banks being robbed of hundreds of thousands in broad daylight. United States mails looted of millions and hold-up men getting so tired of their regular trade that they now steal entire freight trains, the charges against the seven ball players seemed too weak and childish to be considered seriously. Shades of Jesse James!

Judge Landis Takes a Firm Stand

TT IS indeed fortunate that Organized Baseball was able to place a man like Judge K. M. Landis at the head of its affairs, for it now is up to the Judge to handle the cases of the athletes after their court victory. ready two have said they would seek reinstatement, and the chances are that others will attempt the same thing

Judge Landis lost no time in taking a positive stand in the matter. So after the verdict was announced he came to but with a statement which makes everything clear and closes the major league gates against all tainted ball

'Regardless of the verdict of juries." said the Judge, "no player that throws a ball game, no player that entertains proposals or promises to throw game, no player that sits in a conference with a bunch of crooked players and samblers where ways and means of throwing games are discussed, and dares not tell his club about it, will ever play in professional baseball. 'Just keep in mind that, regardless of verdiets of juries, baseball is entirely competent to protect itself against the tricks both inside and out

That statement seems to cover everything. Judge Landis evidently has made an investigation on his own book, collected a lot of private evidence and knows better than any one else how the gambers worked with the players before the grand expose. He is determined to keep the game clean, and the work could not be placed in better hands.

As for reinstating the players after the verdict of the jury, it might be well to remember that Benny Kauff has not yet been recognized. It would not be at all surprising if some unscrupatous promoter would have the effrontery to attempt to exploit the discredited athletes through independent booking. It is doubtful if the public would stand for it.

EGALLY, the case is all washed up. The players and the gamblers L have been freed, but that does not clear them in the eyes of the baseball fans. Their standing is just the same as the day the confessions were published.

Lew Tendler Has Scored Nineteen Knockouts

LEASE tell me through your columns," writes Myer Frankel, of At-I lantic City, "how many knockouts Lew Tendler has scored since he has been boxing. I claim be has more than fifteen, and another says he hasn't Tendler never was known as a knockout artist, but in his career he has stopped exactly nineteen opponents. On the night of August 12 he hopes to raise the total to twenty. Lew always was clever, depending more upon a superb defense and his boxing to gain decisions over his opponents. He learned early in the game that this would prolong his effectiveness and save him from broken hands. Then, after he had waded through the bantam and featherweight divisions and was ready for the lightweights, he began to put over some knockout wallops. It was then that he gained fame and became the recognized contender for the lightweight title. In 1914 Tendler knocked out Freddy Halfling in four rounds. The next year Freddy Diggins went to sleep in four rounds. There was nothing doing in 1916, but in 1917 he stopped Jack Russo in five stanzas. Thus in four years he scored exactly three knockouts.

Business was better in 1918 and his first knockout victim was red-headed Tommy Toughey, who flopped in the fourth. Pete Hartley and Frankie Nelson also were stopped in the fourth. Frankle Britt in the third and the referee stopped his bout with Frankie Callahan in the ninth. In 1919 George Chancy was rocked to sleep in the first, Stanley Yokum in the fourth, George Erne in two and Johnny Noyes in two. Last year he scored knorkouts over Allentown Dander in two frames, Dick De Saunders in three, Stanley Hinckle in six, George Papin in six, Frankie Callahan in five, Eddie Kelly in five and Chick Simler in seven. This makes a total of nineteen.

THE fourth scems to be Tendler's lucky round. He has stopped six opponents in that stanza. Copyright 1921, by Public Leitger Co.

Delanco, N. J., Aug. 4 - "Hype" Igoe, veteran boxing critic, New York sports writer and cartoonist, has been at Lew Tendler's training quarters here for three days, and he is enthused over the challenger's chances for his bout with the champion, Benny Leonard, at the Phillies' Ball Park, tomorrow night a week. Mr. Igoe left today for New York where he will watch Leonard in his training.

"Tendler looks like an even bet to me," said Igoe today. "He is the best of the boxers in the running for Leon-ard's title, and in his workouts here he has showed me that he stands a good chance of winning the championship.
